Family and friends, a busy young professional, accommodate any size group. Two side-by-side sinks, two separate sinks, a breakfast bar, has a wonderful atmosphere. Inspired by the room's architecture, a central island is a portal to complement the space, but used glass doors to keep the espresso bar area kept light and airy.

For this project we decided the concept would be retro and clean ... reminiscent of the client's grandparents' home built in the '50s, but still new and modern. The client wanted an open kitchen great for entertaining large groups, or just her family of four. Our inspiration came from a sculptured rug in the adjoining family room and set the color palette and the tone. It was inspired by one from her grandparents' home. The kitchen style was influenced by a European kitchen the owner had seen in a magazine. Disguising the stairwell that projected into the room from the ceiling above was a challenge for us. I designed the dropped soffit about the cabinets to help hide it and then a few of the upper cabinets are dummies to also help disguise the area. Other than that, I had a wonderful, open space with tall ceilings and a very adventuresome client who was willing to try fun things!
